

PRISM is Sophia College's cultural committee. But it has always been more than that. It is home to so many of us who learn and grow so much just by working together for the students and the contingent of our college.

From setting up shop in the canteen for t-shirt and hoodie sales to organising fundraisers and managing the chaos in Bhabha hall's backstage green rooms on college day, PRISM does it all. One of the team's biggest accomplishments is getting to manage and work with our contingent; hoping to inspire them and help them hone their talent and showcase it to others. In addition to working with the contingent, PRISM works towards bridging the gap between the contingent members and the various college fests that take place throughout the city. The committee is responsible for ensuring that the contingent's registrations are carried out, group practices are held regularly prior to the fest, while also keeping a check on any other technical assistance that they may need on the final day.

PRISM is also a gateway for the First-Years towards everything that Sophia College has to offer. This is done through our annual orientation event - Glimpses. Glimpses covers every extra-curricular aspect of the college that the students have the opportunity to be a part of. Finally, PRISM also organises the event that is really close to the students' hearts, that is, College Day. The team, in collaboration with the members of the CUC core and class representatives of every class, work for days to make certain that the final event is one that everyone would cherish deeply.

This one committee has been a source of great comfort and growth and has seen years of hard work, organisation, opposing ideas and truck loads of creativity!
