

SSRI WEBSITE REPORT

- What we do?

The Students' Social reform Initiative (SSRI) provides a platform for students who are committed to reaching out to the wider community. Their activities aim at bringing about change and transformation in the lives of many others. Using the means of politics, history and the current affairs, SSRI believes in building individuals that are active agents of social change in our society!

- Ethos:

SSRI can be described appropriately in three words. Pride, Power and Promise

SSRI aims to build a community among the college peers who are not afraid to voice their beliefs. SSRI believes that change is an incessant and long journey that takes promise and will. We believe that every student has in them an urge to see themselves and their community work towards a promising future that is inches closer to equality.

- Theme of the year:

At SSRI, social reform is a constant. This year, we attempt to throw light on the work of social reformers and activists of the past and the present who have unceasingly worked towards the upliftment of depressed and marginalised groups and the rights of people. Through interactive seminars and discussion groups SSRI aims to emulate or even learn from these powerful personalities.
