

M.A. in Gender Studies

Program Specific Objectives:

1. To provide knowledge, skills, expertise in the field of Gender Studies.
2. To analyse the emerging dimensions within the field of gender studies.
3. To analyse the social, economic, political, intellectual and cultural contributions of women and other gender
4. To apply this knowledge in furthering their careers.
5. To conduct research on issues pertaining to gender lives and relations

Program Specific Outcomes:

1. Graduates will demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of gender studies theories, concepts, and methodologies.
2. Students will be able to identify and analyze emerging trends, debates, and developments within the field of gender studies.
3. Students will be able to apply their gender studies knowledge and skills in various professional contexts. They will possess critical thinking abilities and be capable of addressing gender-related challenges and promoting inclusivity in workplaces, policymaking, and other domains.
4. Graduates will have the competence to conduct original research on gender-related issues. They will be skilled in qualitative and quantitative research methodologies, allowing them to investigate and contribute to the understanding of gender lives and relations.
5. Students will develop empathy and sensitivity towards gender-related issues, allowing them to engage in open and respectful dialogues about gender diversity and inclusivity. They will be able to create safe spaces for discussions on gender-related topics.
6. Students will be able to recognize the complex ways in which gender interacts with various identities and power structures, both locally and globally.