Programme Outline: SMAGS (SEMESTER IV – Research and Dissertation)

Name of the course	Credits
Dissertation: Writing and presentation	16

Preamble:

The Master of Arts Programme in Gender Studies offers a rigorous, interdisciplinary approach to exploring the complexities of gender, sexuality, and identity in diverse contexts. Understanding of gender dynamics is essential for fostering social justice, equity, and inclusivity in a rapidly evolving society. This program is dedicated to analysing how gender intersects with race, class, ethnicity, and other social categories, shaping the experiences of individuals and communities. Through critical inquiry, research, and engagement, students will challenge traditional norms, question systemic inequalities, and contribute to the development of a more equitable society. By combining theory with hands-on experience, this program equips students to become leaders, advocates, and scholars dedicated to making impactful changes within local and global contexts.

PROGRAMME OBJECTIVES

PO 1	Provide knowledge, skills, and expertise to analyse the emerging dimensions within the field of Gender Studies.
PO 2	Develop ability to analyse the social, economic, political, intellectual and cultural contributions of women and other gender
PO 3	Prepare for careers in research, public service, law, journalism, national-international organizations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and other related fields.

PROGRAMME SPECIFIC OUTCOMES

PSO 1	The Learner will be able to critically analyse and evaluate theories, research, and societal discourses related to gender and its intersections with other social categories such as race, class, and ability.
PSO 2	The Learner will be equipped with the knowledge and skills to engage in advocacy and activism aimed at promoting gender equality, social justice, and the rights of marginalized and underrepresented groups.
PSO 3	The Learner will be able to pursue research and higher studies on gender-related issues, employing appropriate methodologies.
